Oliver's is pleased to announce Wilson Artisan Wines as the Winery of the Month for April

The Wilson Artisan Wines story began when Ken Wilson and his wife Diane started buying land in western Dry Creek Valley in the early 1980s, planting their first vines in 1988. With his success in the vineyard, Ken continued to acquire and plant more vineyards in the 1990s. The Wilsons were interested in making wine early on, but they didn't start until 1993, when they bought the historic Fredson Winery from the retiring Chris Fredson. The barn they acquired was 100 years old and still contained the original redwood vats and tanks. Obtaining county permits and restoring the old barn took several years. Ken and Diane, who has a background in biochemistry, then began fulfilling their dream: making their own wine. By 1998, the complete winemaking operation was housed in what is now Wilson Winery.

Today, Ken and Diane farm more than 600 acres of Dry Creek Valley hillside vineyards. Ken's wisdom and vision has resulted in quality vineyard sourcing which has brought notable recognition to the Wilson Artisan Wineries. Ken and his wife Diane now own eleven wineries offering exceptional wines, beautiful scenery, and friendly, informative staff along with two Healdsburg Inns.

We are pleased to offer Oliver's customers some of our best-selling wines from the Wilson Artisan Wines portfolio this month.
